

Memo to Universal Voucher Advocates: You Don't Own the Road

Universal voucher addicts proclaim that parents have an unalienable right to a tax-paid voucher for each of their offspring just because they pay taxes.

Some vehicle drivers seem to feel that way. They drive like they own the road. The rules of the road do not apply to them. However, they don't own the road just because they pay fuel tax. The fuel tax is applied to the construction and operation of the highway. It doesn't belong to the individual driver. Neither does the tax money raised to operate the constitutionally-required public common school system belong to individuals. It belongs to the SYSTEM!
