

Marilou Johaneck's June 18 Ohio Capital Journal article puts the EdChoice voucher in valid, actual perspective.

In the article, Johaneck identifies some of the “bosses” that dictate Ohio's policy agenda with emphasis on the voucher fiasco. She notes crisply: “The billion-dollar windfall to offset private school tuition many families can afford would be a godsend to public schools making do with less. God bless those who choose to send their students to expensive parochial institutions. But none of us agreed to collectively finance your private school choice that, frankly, serves a private interest, not a public one.”
