

Failing to resist the voucher threat to the public common school in this voucher-saturated environment is death knell to the public common school.

Put your faith in fellow citizens. In three states the folks voted down vouchers on November 5. In other words, the folks defeated out-of-touch politicians and their wealthy deep-pocketed donors. Those who understand the threat that vouchers pose to the common school system must push back against the pro-voucher politicians and the politicians that fear the pro-voucher politicians in control of state government.

Boards of Education in Ohio need to protect their local taxpayers from being overburdened by politicians who shortchange school districts by subsidizing affluent folks who choose private schools. Boards of Education need to join the Vouchers Hurt Ohio lawsuit. Failure to resist the voucher explosion is a strike against property taxpayers and school district students.
