

Billionaire elites are using unsuspecting voucher advocates to dumb down American education. Why? Transfer of the nation's wealth away from the folks.

Billionaires support public policy that shifts the wealth of the nation increasingly away from the less affluent folks to the billionaires. They support vouchers because voucher students do not do as well academically as public school district students. Plutocrats, nabob-types, want to develop a permanent underclass that they can control and that has no choice but to work in low-wage jobs. These elites passionately resist unions and thus really like vouchers as a means of reducing the public cost of education. They have the goal of reducing educational opportunities for all students except for the elites. When they remove public common schools from the education landscape, they will reduce the value of vouchers and put in place an Economist Milton Friedman-vision of eventually putting the total cost of education on the parents.

Citizens, in particular local school district officials, should awaken to the reality that the grand scheme is to destroy the public common school to the end that the government will ultimately be divested of the responsibility for the education of the populace.

It is past time that citizens awake to the sinister plot of the billionaire elites. By the way, the end game for voucher users will eventually not be pretty.
