

Talking point used by a private school voucher supporter that reveals the mentality of many voucher zealots.

Talking points used by the pro-EdChoice voucher crowd are typically doltish. One such argument written by a pro-voucher supporter is, "taxpayer dollars belong to the taxpayer, not school districts." Tax-supported EdChoice vouchers are being paid directly to private schools. So, when the private school receives the voucher check from the state, should the taxpayer be able to collect back funds from the private school if they oppose vouchers?

The idea that one's tax payment still belongs to him/her is an interesting concept that never was or ever shall be.

When a person pays taxes, some of which goes to a public library, does a portion of the library fund belong to that individual taxpayer if he/she does not use the library?

VOUCHER ZEALOTS, PLEASE KEEP USING THE TALKING POINT, "TAXPAYER DOLLARS BELONG TO THE TAXPAYER, NOT SCHOOL DISTRICTS." EDCHOICE VOUCHER ZEALOTS PUPPET RIDICULOUS TALKING POINTS BECAUSE VOUCHERS ARE NOT SUPPORTED IN THE OHIO CONSTITUTION. Franklin County Court of Common Pleas Judge Jaiza Page has ruled the EdChoice voucher scheme unconstitutional.
