

Message from the folks who visit the Coalition's booth at the State Fair: When they find out their school district is not financially supporting the EdChoice voucher litigation; they wonder why.

Nearly 350 boards of education in Ohio financially support the Coalition's lawsuit against the state's EdChoice voucher litigation. When informed that a majority of state legislators and the Governor are underfunding public school districts and appropriating tax funds for the benefit of parents of private school students, they typically become outraged. No wonder! The very idea of refusing to fund the constitutionally-required common school system and tossing a huge bundle of the tax money to private schools on behalf of their private school parents does not pass the smell test.
